

No. 1

BT:325 / RT:306 / FT:250 / PAR:4 / HDCP:17

- Tee
The area just to the left of the fairway bunker is out of bounds. The right side is wide open.
- Fairway
You'll have to carry the bunker if the cup is on the right side of the green, so make sure that you have the distance to get close on the fly.
- Approach
The green slopes down toward the left. Plan for some run on approach shots from the right and be aggressive from the left.
- On the Green
The right side of this two-tiered green is higher, and the grain goes toward the ocean.

No. 2

BT:452 / RT:440 / FT:345 / PAR:4 / HDCP:1

- Tee
Aim for the narrow landing area between the pine tree on the right and the fairway bunker on the left.
- Fairway
The fairway appears to be flat, but it actually slopes upward. Make sure your second shot carries the grass bunker in front of the green.
- Approach / On the Green
Shots from the back or right side of the green are a nightmare—downhill and with the grain. Plan your approach and putting strategy carefully.

No. 3

BT:520 / RT:472 / FT:366 / PAR:5 / HDCP:13

- Tee
Fly the fairway bunker on the right to eat up plenty of yards and give yourself a chance to get on in two.
- Fairway
Choose your club carefully for the downhill lie on your second shot.
- Approach
You face another downhill lie from the area just before the pond, but it is no easier to go deep and come in from the rear bunker.
- On the Green
The green is long and sloped toward you, but the grain goes toward the pond in the front and toward the bunker in the back.

No. 4

BT:185 / RT:134 / FT:112 / PAR:3 / HDCP:8

- Tee
The wind swirls over the green, so be sure to check the trees as well as the flag.
- Approach
Beware of the vast right front bunker with the tall wall.
- On the Green
The complexity of the green demands a delicate touch, particularly on putts with the grain from the right side.

No. 5

BT:378 / RT:343 / FT:255 / PAR:4 / HDCP:7

- Tee
Aim to the left of the fairway bunker. You'll need to go 230 yards on the fly to clear it.
- Fairway
Dreaded white stakes tightly enclose the long green and choke the apron, so you need a good feel for distance and direction to negotiate your approach.
- Approach
Shots from the apron are into the grain. Pay close attention to the winds over the green.
- On the Green
The entire green slopes from back to front. Putt carefully from beyond the pin.

No. 6

BT:390 / RT:280 / FT:240 / PAR:4 / HDCP:3

- Tee
Avoid the pine tree on the left, but keep your drive under 210 yards or face a downhill lie for your approach.
- Fairway
Club up liberally to get your second shot in the air. The looming wall of the front bunker shields the green from view.
- Approach
It is relatively easy to take your approach from the left side—the downward slope makes it difficult from the right.
- On the Green
The rear of the long, two-tiered green is higher. Putts from the rear have a long downward slope to navigate.

No. 7

BT:180 / RT:156 / FT:91 / PAR:3 / HDCP:14

- Tee
The trees surrounding the tee box make it difficult to tell the direction of the wind. The area in front of the green slopes toward you, so your tee shot needs to carry all the way to the green.
- Approach
The stubborn rough left of the elevated green is sure to grab your club head, making it difficult to get a feel for the distance for your approach.
- On the Green
The green looks relatively flat, but it has a subtle slope and grain. The front of the green is especially steep and fast.

No. 8

BT:424 / RT:383 / FT:325 / PAR:4 / HDCP:5

- Tee
The area past the bunker slopes down into the pond, so take care when planting your tee.
- Fairway
The green is wide but shallow, so you may roll right off if you aim for and land in the center. Four greenside bunkers add to the challenge of reaching in regulation.
- Approach
The green slopes from left to right, adding speed to shots from the left.
- On the Green
The grain is clearly visible on this crowned green. Check it carefully before you putt.

No. 9

BT:564 / RT:529 / FT:429 / PAR:5 / HDCP:5

- Tee
Aim for the middle of the fairway. Stay out of the stubborn rough to the left.
- Fairway
Navigate the gentle dogleg right by aiming over the bunker with your second shot. You'll end up in the trees if you go too far left in an effort to avoid the bunker.
- Approach
The green is elevated over the apron. Stubborn rough is sure to grab your club head.
- On the Green
The break is from the front of the long green toward the back right, and it's stronger than it looks, so choose your line carefully.

No.10 BT:480 / RT:443 / FT:310 / PAR:5 / HDCP:18

- Tee
Get over the valley below, but stay left of the cart path as it is difficult to hit from the right.
- Fairway
A strong tee shot may set up a chance to get on in two, but make sure you can carry the pond guarding the green.
- Approach
Approach shots from the apron are easiest. The green slopes away from the right bunker, making it difficult for sand shots to stop.
- On the Green
The slope and grain on this left-to-right green are the same, so it is best to overcompensate for the break.

No.11 BT:336 / RT:273 / FT:217 / PAR:4 / HDCP:9

- Tee
A great drive down the middle may end up over the trees and out of bounds. Long drivers should aim for the hill to the right and use the slope to shorten the dogleg.
- Fairway
The fairway slopes up toward the green more steeply than it appears, so make sure your second shot can cover the distance.
- Approach
Par is but a dream from the left front bunker, and approach shots from the rear will not want to stop on the sheer downslope. Attack from in front of the cup.

No.12 BT:370 / RT:353 / FT:235 / PAR:4 / HDCP:12

- Tee
The entire fairway slopes to the left, so you'll lose some distance if you pipe your drive right down the middle. Take a big swing at the hill to the right.
- Fairway
The green also slopes to the left, so take aim a bit to the right.
- Approach
It is easiest to take your approach from the apron or the left side of the green. The slope and grain make it a challenge to come from the right bunker or from the back, and forget trying to putt from the back right.

No.13 BT:161 / RT:142 / FT:126 / PAR:3 / HDCP:16

- Tee
Avoid overshooting the green at all costs—approach shots from beyond the green must go downhill and with the grain. Take note of the wind passing above the trees.
- Approach / On the Green
The green slopes dramatically away from the back left bunker. The slope is also difficult to navigate from the right side, and putting from there requires attention to the break.

No.14 BT:400 / RT:382 / FT:295 / PAR:4 / HDCP:4

- Tee
Aim for the middle of the fairway. Going too far left makes it difficult to be aggressive with your second shot.
- Fairway
You will likely have a slight uphill lie, so aim for the right side of the green. Watch out for the tree on the front right.
- Approach
It is easiest to take your approach from the right side of the green.
- On the Green
The grain of the saddle-shaped green goes from right to left, making it a challenging read.

No.15 BT:364 / RT:346 / FT:217 / PAR:4 / HDCP:14

- Tee
Nasty rough is waiting to gobble up your drives if they drift right, so aim just outside the trees to the left.
- Approach
Deep bunkers guard the green on both sides, but the two on the left are particularly cavernous. Accuracy is paramount on your approach.
- On the Green
The slope and grain oppose each other, so the break around the hole will not be as strong as it appears.

No.16 BT:185 / RT:167 / FT:125 / PAR:3 / HDCP:10

- Tee
Use less club for this downhill tee shot. The trees to the right of the green will tell you what the wind is up to.
- Approach
The sand in the three greenside bunkers is firm and will have its way with your club head.
- On the Green
The green slopes from front to back. It is best to underestimate the break.

No.17 BT:425 / RT:407 / FT:307 / PAR:4 / HDCP:2

- Tee
Stay on the left side of the fairway rather than trying to blast your drive past the bunker.
- Fairway
Club up liberally to cover the distance up the hill for your second shot.
- Approach
If you have to miss the green somewhere, miss left—approach shots from the left are relatively easy.
- On the Green
The rear of this long, two-tiered green is elevated. Three-putts are practically inevitable if you land on the tier opposite the cup. Be mindful of the grain on the lower tier.

No.18 BT:536 / RT:500 / FT:363 / PAR:5 / HDCP:11

- Tee
Out of bounds is nearby on the left side, so try to wind up in front of the bunkers to the right.
- Fairway
The apron is flanked by bunkers on both sides, but it is flat inside 100 yards, enhancing your chances at ending your round with a birdie.
- Approach
Be careful with approach shots from behind the green that have to travel downhill.
- On the Green
Though the green slopes back to front, the grain is opposite and lends unexpected speed even to uphill putts.
